

James Cassidy Bio

James is a multifaceted and passionate scientist and engineer. He has been a member of the church since 2004, participating in Sunday School and Youth Group programs until he graduated high school. After returning to Norman post-undergrad, he returned to the church where he has continued to participate in multiple programs, such as youth ministry, community outreach, and now the vestry. He strongly believes in the embodiment of the Word through personal action, the centrality of communion in developing fellowship, and the ever-presence of God's agape for every single one of us. He works for the University of Oklahoma.
